Upcoming study on anterior open bite

The Network, in cooperation with the American Association of Orthodontists, will launch a study involving orthodontists in the latter half of 2015. The study is being led by Dr. Greg Huang, Chair at the University of Washington Department of Orthodontics. The project will recruit 250 orthodontic practitioners from across the nation who are interested in conducting research in their own offices.

If you know of any orthodontists who are interested in participating in a study and would like to join the network, please let them know to visit our web site to enroll online, or to contact one of the Regional Coordinators who can assist with the registration process and answer any questions.

Network article on improving dental care through research

NIDCR's newsletter, Science Spotlight, featured an article on the network discussing the state of the network, updates on our studies, and the impact practice-based research has on oral health. Click here to read the article.
