Levels of Evidence and the Randomized Clinical Trial (RCT)
Dr. Dale Williams, Principal Investigator of the DPBRN Coordinating Center, and Dr. Martha Wallace, DPBRN Executive Committee member and DPBRN practitioner-investigator, Birmingham, Alabama. Dr. Williams is a biostatistician who has been involved with many RCTs. Dr. Wallace directed an RCT in the early part of her career when she was a faculty member at the University of Alabama at Birmingham School of Dentistry, and will provide a practitioner-investigator's perspective on RCTs. They will discuss the fact that study design typically determines the scientific strength of a study, and highlight one specific study design, the RCT. The NIDCR PBRN Monitoring Committee has requested that DPBRN begin doing RCTs.
- 10:45 - 11:15 AM
An RCT example: the Envisioned "SEAL-DPBRN" Study
Dr. Vibeke Qvist, Principal Investigator of an RCT called "SEAL-DPBRN" that is being considered by the DPBRN Executive Committee. She will discuss this possible study and the realities of doing RCTs in busy clinical practices.

	11:15 - 12:00 Noon Panel Discussion and Question/Answer Session About Planned Studies and Randomized Clinical Trials Panelists and audience members discuss and answer questions about ongoing, upcoming, and envisioned DPBRN studies, including the notion of doing RCTs in DPBRN practices.
